

To All those that Volunteered,

I wish to thank everyone that participated in this build. Every one of you should be damn proud of what you accomplished. You persevered Mother Nature, each other, and all general normal building conditions and yet you built the best home that anyone could have asked for. Better and with a higher quality than most homes ever see.

You all need to know that the State of Connecticut is going to certify this home as a “Certified Green Home” because it more than met all the States standards for this certification. One of only three in the State. You all should also know that this home will be the cheapest home in the state to operate because of its geothermal heating and cooling system, along with it 9k solar panel electrical generating system. We also have the highest “R” values one could ask for with its sprayed foam and loose batt combination wall system, as well as the loose fill insulation in the attic. This combination of insulation beats all standards by more than 50% of what would be required as a minimum. Additionally we insulated the foundation with rigid foam on both the walls and the floor.

You all did this and kept the highest of standards while doing such.

All of you built this home with love, hope, commitment and unselfishness. No one complained nor fought. Something you almost never see on a job site. All of you made this difference.

I have never been so proud of all of you and our society than I am right now. All of you doing this have given me the hope that we as a society have a chance of survival in the world today. In these tough times when people might be more likely to complain and to ask what about me, all of you didn't. I want to thank you for that. Thank you for being a better person then those bloggers that write negative untrue stories about things they know nothing about, because they choose to complain instead of choosing to join in. Thank you for being true to yourself and your fellow man. Thank you for being there, in a time of need. Thank you for not being selfish. Thank you for taking the time from your regular day. Thank you.

With the holiday season upon us I want to wish all of you a Happy Holiday, but most of all, I want to wish you the best - because you all have earned this as well as deserve it.

Thank you all for being there,

Bruno
